

Aldea Solutions Inc. brings Manchester United TV to Mexico

Aldea to transport Manchester United Channel to Sky Mexico Platform

Las Vegas, April 11th, 2011 -- Aldea Solutions Inc. announced today at the National Association of Broadcasters (NAB) Convention, the largest broadcast industry show in North America, that it has been selected by Sky Mexico to transport the Manchester United Channel from London to Mexico.

Spurred by United's first Mexican player, Javier "Chicharito" Hernandez, Sky Mexico will now integrate the MUTV channel onto its programming schedule for distribution to Mexico and Central America.

Aldea, a leading provider of broadcast-quality video services in the Americas, will be using its high-capacity terrestrial network connecting the United Kingdom and Mexico for this application.

"We are honored to provide this new channel to Sky Mexico. Aldea's high capacity HD/SD international fibre network coupled with our software management system has permitted us to quickly provision this new service" said Lionel Bentolila, CEO at Aldea. In addition to the transmission services Aldea will also be providing signal conversion services to adapt the native signal to the north-American format.

Aldea provides end-to-end worldwide transmission services using fibre facilities. As well as the extensive connectivity throughout the America's, Aldea's own network extends into Europe with dedicated fibre connectivity into London, Spain and France as well as partner agreements for fibre and teleport services into the Nordic region.
